Wicked-Weather Workouts

BY Kathy Santo

“TRAINING EXERCISES THAT YOU CAN DO INDOORS IN SMALL SPACES.

You might be thinking: I can't do this because I don't allow my dog in certain rooms of my house! The purpose of this is to utilize indoor space to accomplish your dog-training goals. Even if your dog is not “allowed” in certain rooms, when you have practice sessions in them, your dog will begin to see those rooms as places that aren't for partying but for training. COME!

Who needs a fenced-in yard to train the come command? Not you. I'm not asking you to work the command from a sit-stay, which is probably the method you've used in the past. But when you practice come that way, you're teaching the dog: “First you sit, then you stay, then I'll call you to come.” That's good, but I imagine that if you're living anywhere outside of an obedience ring, you need your dog to come to you when he's doing anything but a sit-stay! This exercise will ensure that he's ready to show up when you call, no matter what he's doing.

Start with your dog on a leash and walk around your house. When he's distracted, call him to come. After a time or two, your dog may get the hang of this exercise and stay close to you in anticipation of the fun of running to you. At that point, you must create your own distractions. How about tossing a treat or toy ahead of you, and when your dog is moving toward it, call him?” Ask a friend to ring the doorbell, and then call your dog. Take it one step further by calling him after the doorbell rings and someone walks in. You're holding the leash, so you can guarantee your dog's success. These are great exercises that not only work on your dog's response to the come command, but also teach your dog that even when an exciting event occurs—doorbell, door opening, food falling—your dog still expects him to respond to you.

Out-of-the-Blue Stays

In obedience class, dogs line up, they sit, their owners formally tell their dog to stay,

TAKE NOTE

HEARTWORM ALERT

Merial Limited, the company that provides IMMITICIDE (used as the treatment for heartworm) has recently informed veterinarians that they experienced some technical issues in the production facility & that a shortage was anticipated. Because of excessive demand in anticipation of that shortage, their inventory has been exhausted. They have made temporary arrangements with their European supplier but the limited European supply "will only satisfy a small fraction of the US demand." Therefore, it is very critical that everyone is diligent about use of heartworm prevention medications. Heartworms could now be a death sentence because there may be no treatment available for several months.

Resolve to keep Pet at Healthful Weight

Weight loss ranks high on the list of New Year's resolutions. But while people may recognize that their clothing has become too snug and they should reduce, pet owners often have a hard time seeing that their pet's girth has also expanded unacceptably.

Pet obesity is a growing problem that often isn't taken seriously, even though it contributes to life-threatening and life-shortening conditions such as cancer, heart disease, joint problems, and more.

Kim Knap, a certified veterinary technician and a certified canine rehabilitation practitioner, runs the Companion Animal Rehabilitation clinic at the University of Illinois Veterinary Teaching Hospital in Urbana. Through a program called "Shape up, Pup!" Knap works with pet owners to develop practical, individualized plans to safely achieve and maintain ideal body weight for pets.

If you are uncertain whether your pet may have a weight problem, Knap offers these guidelines: "You should be able to easily feel the ribs without a layer of fat. When you look down at your pet, you should be able to see a waist, and when you look from the side, you should see a tucked abdomen," she says.

But what if Fluffy is, well, fluffy?

"For pets with lots of fur, run your hands through the fur to see if you can easily feel her ribs," says Knap.

If you think your pet's weight may be a problem, call this to the attention of your veterinarian. If the veterinarian rules out metabolic disorders, you may be referred to a rehab program like "Shape up, Pup!" that would create a personalized plan to fit you and your pet. These programs often have special equipment, such as a doggy treadmill, that will make exercise more fun for your pet. You will find plenty of options and people who can help once you start looking.

Knap cautions that unmonitored treats are a common pitfall in an otherwise well-regulated pet diet.

"Commercial treats are typically high in calories," says Knap, "and the semi-moist variety is especially bad. Moist treats add fats and sugars to keep them moist."

What should you do if your pet habitually looks at you with big sad eyes and begs for treats? Knap says he may really just be begging for your attention and playtime. Try finding more time to play, she advises, which provides both the attention he craves and the activity he needs.

Another approach Knap recommends is to replace calorie-laden treats with baby carrots or ice cubes, inexpensive choices that your pet will love. Most dogs will be just as thrilled about getting that carrot piece and your attention as getting a processed commercial treat. And you might enjoy watching your pet dash after the slippery ice cube just as much as your pet likes chasing it.

Keeping pets at an ideal weight helps them live longer, healthier lives. Fit pets can make the most of play time without tuckering out early, and they are less likely to develop chronic, life-threatening diseases.

A.K.C. CELEBRATES OWNER/HANDLERS IN THE SPORT WITH NEW SERIES

More than 80% of the dogs being exhibited in the show ring today are family dogs shown by their owners. To celebrate the dedication and enthusiasm of these exhibitors, the American Kennel Club has created a new AKC Owner/Handler Series, a non-titling competition that will showcase owner handled dogs at shows across the country.

"We're pleased to offer this special competition to celebrate AKC's owner/handlers, who are the core of our dog sport," said Robin Stansell, AKC's Vice President of Event Operations. "We look forward to great competition in 2012 as the AKC Owner/Handler Series visits dog shows all over the country."

The top-ranked dogs from the AKC Owner/Handler Series will be posted on www.akc.org and the top 10 owner-handled dogs of each breed and variety will be invited to compete at an "end of year" competition show. Rankings of the dogs competing in the series will be compiled based on the Best of Breed, Group and Best in Show placements in this specific series competition.

The first shows offering the AKC Owner/Handler Series are these January/February events:

- Sahuaro State Kennel Club                      Saturday, February 4, 2012
- Colorado Kennel Club                              Sunday, February 19, 2012
- International Kennel Club of Chicago      Sunday, February 26, 2012

The AKC Owner/Handler competition will be conducted following Best of Breed judging in each breed ring. All dogs in the BOB competition (including WD & WB) will stay in the ring after the judge makes their placements in BOB competition. The ring steward will ask all professional handlers to leave the ring and then the judge will then select the Best Owner Handler (BOH). The dog and its owner will continue to accrue points for any group placements or Bests in Show.

Dogs owned or exhibited by professional handlers are not eligible for this competition. Professional handlers are defined as any person who belongs or has belonged to a professional handlers' organization, distributed rate cards, or otherwise advertised or represented themselves as handling dogs for pay.

For more information about the series or to find upcoming shows where the AKC Owner/Handler Series will be offered, visit www.akc.org.

Keep your pets safe from natural toxins

By Sarah D. Bunting

Lots of "people food" and pretty plants can have harmful, even fatal effects on our furry friends. Keep them safe with this checklist of natural toxins; you might be surprised at what you find.

FOODS

Apples: All the non-meat parts of an apple -- the stem, leaves, and seeds -- contain cyanide, which is poisonous to animals and humans.

Avocado: Avocados contain persin, a toxic fatty-acid derivative that can cause gastrointestinal and respiratory distress, fluid around the heart, and even death. All species -- domesticated animals, cattle, even fish -- are susceptible, so keep the guac well out of reach of your pets.

Bread dough: Cindy Wenger, animal communicator, comments that "a little bit of bread dough can cause a big problem." Why? "A dog's stomach creates the perfect warm environment to allow bread dough to do what it does best, and that's rise," Wenger says. "Bread dough can quickly expand in a dog or cat's stomach, causing it to distend beyond its capacity, cutting off its blood supply." On top of that, fermenting yeast can produce ethanol; once that's absorbed into the bloodstream, your pet may appear uncoordinated and disoriented. (Drunk, in other words. Not good.)

Chocolate: Large amounts cause stomach cramping and vomiting in dogs and cats. (Keep in mind too that, for a cat or small dog, a couple of mini Special Dark bars is a large amount relative to their size.)

Grapes/raisins: It's unclear how many grapes or raisins your pet would need to eat to cause kidney failure -- some sources think it could take as few as four -- but why risk it?

Mushrooms: All kinds -- not just the sketchy-looking ones in your back yard -- are poisonous to dogs.

Nuts: Macadamias and walnuts contain a toxin that affects the digestive and nervous systems of dogs, and could cause seizures.

Onions: In raw or cooked form, onions -- and their cousins, like chives and leeks -- are toxic to cats and dogs. They contain thiosulphate, which can cause vomiting, diarrhea, and shortness of breath in pets. What's worse, says pet expert Steven May of The Daily Growl, "Typically the symptoms won't show up for a day or two." May recommends taking your pet to the vet right away if you think she's eaten onions; better safe than sorry.

Sugar-free gum and mints: Sugar-free snacks and candy sometimes contain Xylitol, an artificial sweetener that's the enemy of your dog's liver.

and everyone walks away. But when was the last time your dog was already sitting when you had an unexpected need for a stay? Was it the time you broke a glass? How about when you opened the refrigerator and the orange juice fell on the floor? That's where out-of-the-blue stays come in handy. You're going to teach your dog that stays can occur at any time. Because we start this exercise on leash, you'll have all of the training benefits without any of the drama.

Start by making a list of all the distractions you need to train for, and the rooms you'd like to train in. A short list for a kitchen might look like this:

You need your dog to come to you when he's doing anything

- Dog diving into the dishwasher when it's opened
- Dog rushing toward a dropped object
- Dog staying while you set or clear the table

Once you have a list, set up a plan. If I were working on "rushing toward a dropped object," I would probably come up with a few things to drop. One of my favorites is to use an empty vitamin bottle with a few pieces of dog food inside (to mimic the sound of pills). With the dog on leash, drop the bottle and immediately ask for a sit-stay. Don't be discouraged if your dog's initial reaction is huh? or he rushes at the bottle.

Calmly help your dog through the initial surprise of having to perform off the cuff. Remember, this is a completely different exercise than the choreographed sit-stay he's used to doing in dog class. After a few successful rounds of that distraction in one place, move somewhere else in your kitchen. (You might want to practice this exercise in a bathroom, too, if you have a cabinet with medicine in it.)

Soon you'll start to notice that your dog is able to perform sit-stay and a recall immediately, no matter what the distractions are, which is exactly the reason you should do some of your training indoors. Even if the weather outside is not frightful.

So whether you have a house or an apartment and if the weather outside is frightful, you can still get your training done

February is Dental Health Month

Quick Facts About Canine Periodontal Disease

- More than 85% of dogs over 4 years of age have periodontal disease.
- Periodontal disease is a progressive inflammation of the supporting structures around the teeth.
- Signs of periodontal disease include bad breath, redness or bleeding along the gum line, difficulty chewing, drooling, and loose or missing teeth.
- Periodontal disease is diagnosed by examining the teeth and supporting structures while the pet is under anesthesia.

- Gingivitis (inflammation of the gums) can be reversed with a thorough dental cleaning and polishing.
- Loss of tooth attachment, or bone loss, cannot be reversed.
- Treatment of periodontal disease may include antibiotics and other dental procedures, including tooth extraction.
- Regular, at-home dental care, with periodic veterinary dental cleanings, is the best way to prevent periodontal disease and keep your dog's mouth healthy.

An important way to prevent dental disease is regular home dental care. Daily brushing can help remove plaque before it turns into tartar. You can use a child's toothbrush or purchase a finger brush from your veterinarian. Ask your veterinarian what dental hygiene methods are recommended for your dog, and don't forget to keep scheduled appointments.
