The Year in Review

We are thrilled to be the home of so many fine dogs who represent our breed so well in the various venues that our dogs excel in; from herding and obedience to conformation, Search and Rescue (SAR) and Therapy work. For all the accomplishments for our local club members in 2010....well done!!!!

The responsible dog owners throughout the State have again (at least temporarily) defeated legislation that mandated Spay and Neutering of animals in their custody/care. (SB250). Additionally the Governor refused to sign AB241 which would have limited the number of breeding dogs a person could have—commenting that the bill placed an arbitrary cap number. Once again responsible dog owners rallied to the idea that “it is about the quality—not the quantity”.

The fight to protect any of our pet owning rights needs to be vigilantly watched at the City and County levels. Poor regulations on Rescue Groups, Breed Specific Bans (BSL), Mandatory Spay and Neuter (MSN) and the enforcement of the loosely banded about term “Puppy Mill” continues to creep into our City and County board hearing rooms.

2008 and 2009 were huge years for puppies and breeding for our club members, which was reflected in our double digit entries in Puppy Sweeps in the California Specialties this last October. Nor-Cal dogs earned a total of Ten Conformation titles, Three Herding titles, and Eight Companion titles. We also are home to several of the Nationally Ranked Standard Schnauzers with:

CH Charisma Maxim Von Diable (Max)

CH Cortailod Quinta Do Portal (Porto) owned by Alex and Galena Bordetsky

CH Goarrhein Chateau Palos Shiraz
RN TD PT, (Raz) owned by Don & May Lou Just and Harv & Liz Mohrenweiser

Meet the 2010 SSCNC Board

President: Mark Allen and partner, Don Dalton are passionate Owner/Handlers of several Standard Schnauzers in both color schemes. They breed under the Wunder-kind Schnauzers kennel name and are active in Conformation, Obedience and Rally sports. They recently finished two pups from their first litter in the Bred-by classes and won the Best Bred By class at Eukanuba this last December.

First Vice President: Kim Lemke comes to Standard Schnauzers from Labs and years of horse riding and showing. She and her dog, Jack, have trekked all the local dog trails and vistas and enjoy the great outdoors.

After successfully navigating the Conformation rings in 2009, Kim and Jack are embarking on their Performance training.

Second Vice President: Linda Adiletti returns for her second term as 2nd VP and Specialty Chair. She and husband, John, own Sadie and Max—both top SS in the national rankings in

The Outside World (Educational Opportunities, the AKC, Dog Health and Safety)

PETA—Who and What is this Group

PETA president and co-founder Ingrid Newkirk has described her group's overall goal as "total animal liberation." This means the complete abolition of meat, milk, cheese, eggs, honey, zoos, aquariums, circuses, wool, leather, fur, silk, hunting, fishing, and pet ownership.

PETA has given tens of thousands of dollars to convicted arsonists and other violent criminals. This includes a 2001 donation of $1,500 to the North American Earth Liberation Front (ELF), an FBI-certified "domestic terrorist" group responsible for dozens of firebombs and death threats. During the 1990s, PETA paid $70,200 to Rodney Coronado, an Animal Liberation Front (ALF) serial arsonist convicted of burning down a Michigan State University research laboratory. In his sentencing memorandum, a federal prosecutor implicated PETA president Ingrid Newkirk in that crime. PETA vegetarian campaign coordinator Bruce Friedrich has also told an animal rights convention that "blowing stuff up and smashing windows" is "a great way to bring about animal liberation," adding, "Hallelujah to the people who are willing to do it."

PETA activists regularly target children as young as six years old with anti-meat and anti-milk propaganda, even waiting outside their schools to intercept them without notifying their parents. One piece of kid-targeted PETA literature tells small children: "Your Mommy Kills Animals!" PETA brags that its messages reach over 1.2 million minor children, including 30,000 kids between the ages of 6 and 12, all contacted by e-mail without parental supervision. One PETA vice president told the Fox News Channel's audience: "Our campaigns are always geared towards children, and they always will be."

PETA's president has said that "even if animal research resulted in a cure for AIDS, we would be against it." And PETA has repeatedly attacked research foundations like the March of Dimes, the Pediatric AIDS Foundation, and the American Cancer Society, solely because they support animal-based research aimed at curing life-threatening diseases and birth defects. PETA helped to start and manage a quasi-medical front group, the misnamed Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine, to attack medical research head-on—including recent fire bombings in Santa Cruz (2009).

According to government documents, PETA employees have killed more than 19,200 dogs, cats, puppies, and kittens since 1998. This behavior continues despite PETA's moralizing about the "unethical" treatment of animals by farmers, scientists, restaurant owners, circuses, hunters, fishermen, zookeepers, and countless other Americans. PETA puts to death over 90 percent of the animals it accepts from members of the public who expect the group to make a reasonable attempt to find them adoptive homes. PETA holds absolutely no open-adoption shelter hours at its Norfolk, VA headquarters, choosing instead to spend part of its $32 million annual income on a contract with a crematory service to periodically empty hundreds of animal bodies from its large walk-in freezer.

A glimpse into the Humane Society of the U.S (HSUS)

Despite the words "humane society" on its letterhead, the Humane Society of the United States (HSUS) is not affiliated with your local animal shelter. Despite the omnipresent dogs and cats in its fundraising materials, it's not an organization that runs spay/neuter programs or takes in stray, neglected, and abused pets. And despite the common image of animal protection agencies as cash-strapped organizations dedicated to animal welfare, HSUS has become the wealthiest animal rights organization on earth.

While most local animal shelters are under-funded and unsung, HSUS has accumulated $113 million in assets and built a recognizable brand by capitalizing on the confusion its very name provokes. This misdirection results in an irony of which most animal lovers are unaware: HSUS raises enough money to finance animal shelters in every single state, with money to spare, yet it doesn't operate a single one anywhere.

HSUS is a multinational conglomerate with ten regional offices in the United States and a special Hollywood Office that promotes and monitors the media's coverage of animal-rights issues. It includes a huge web of organizations, affiliates, and subsidiaries. Some are nonprofit, tax-exempt "charities," while others are for-profit taxable corporations, which don't have to divulge anything about their financial dealings.

New Product Tested well with my Schnauzers.

*Photos of the Herding Seminar and Instinct test from November 2009 featuring SSCNC Dogs
Thank you SSCNC Member, Christine Dunn for sharing these shots*

Owning three active Standard Schnauzers, and working full time, it is sometimes hard to find activities to keep them (and I) from going stir crazy in the house during those raining days and nights.

I have tried the multitude of chewing treats for my dogs over the years: the stinky Bully sticks and cow hooves, curly cues of tendons and tracheas, ears of every animal imaginable and the occasional horn and antler product. Tastes from Swine to Vegetable have graced the doggy pantry over the years.

The old man, Senate, he'll eat just about any treat set before him in record time—except those plastic and rubber things like Kongs and Nylabones (but then those have never been popular with the pups in this house). Anyway, Senate as a test dog for new treats is hardly a finicky participant in these new treat experiments.

Tank would rather play with a tennis ball, but does enjoy the short term cow or pork based chewing treat. We call them Puppy Pork Rinds for lack of a better descriptions.

Irene, she is the Queen and pooh-poohs (not literally) most chewing treats, preferring a good cookie to most anything that is not wholly consumable in less than 10 seconds.

I recently tried the Himalayan Dog Chews for their "Santa Paws" treat on Christmas Eve and the choir of Angels they did erupt as three dogs took to these tasty (albeit not cheap) imported treats.

It took Senate several hours to work through his medium sized chew and Tank and Irene were still going strong with their medium treats on Christmas day... definitely not sharing with Senate, regardless of how sneaky he was with the bait and switch offerings of a toy for their chewy.

Finding what could be described as K9 chewing Nirvana required further investigation into these items and what made them so special in this abode.

Off to the internet we went ... where I found that the literature was consistent with what I saw with my dogs — it takes a lot of effort to chew down this treat into very small pieces Vs chunks that other chews can produce with a voracious chewer. The treats wear down in pieces the size of shredded cheese.

So what is the Himalayan Dog Chew?

"Chiurpi," as it is called in Nepal, is made by boiling yak and cow milk with a mild citric-acid additive that separates the curds. The curds are then packed tightly into sticks and dried for weeks. The result is a long-lasting chew treat for dogs.

In Nepal, the cheese comes from an ancient recipe that is used by the locals to create a long-lasting snack that they can slowly work in their mouths while they are working in the fields.

It is a kind of preserved cheese. They are made from yak and cow's milk, a little salt and a little lime juice (citric-acid). They are all natural and have no chemicals or preservatives and have been tested and approved for import into the U.S. as safe for animal consumption. The level of salt is small and used only for stabilizing.

Ingredients

Yak and Cow Milk. Salt and Lime Juice.

Protein 52.6 %. Fat 0.9 %. Ash Food 6.0 %. Moisture 10.2 %.

Cost

Small $8.99—$9.99

(usually 3 pieces per pack)

Medium 1 piece $6.89—$8.69

Large 1 piece $6.89—$12.49

As with all treats, owners should review the literature with their veterinarian and introduce slowly. Especially if your dog has any health issues or sensitivity for food items or is prone to not chewing his/her food before swallowing.

SSCNC Logo Is it Time for an Update ????

The Board members have been approached by several club members regarding updating our Club Logo.

The general thoughts of these members is that they would like to adopt the logo from 2008 Specialty with the two standard schnauzers and the Golden Gate Bridge in the background. They feel that the one black and one salt and pepper schnauzer and the geographic association of the Golden Gate Bridge to the Bay Area and Northern California, better reflects the Nor-Cal club at this time.

We have written permission by the artist, Beth Babos, to use the 2 schnauzer/Bridge Logo in the future so long as it is not used for fund raising efforts—meaning we could not sell T-Shirts or Mugs with this Logo. Also that we acknowledge her as Artist in the reproductions.

Because the “logo” belongs to all the Club Members, the Board would like to solicit opinions on the matter BEFORE making any decisions or taking the issue before the Membership.

If there are club members who know the history of the current silhouette Schnauzer Logo, we would love to have that information to share. We seem to be at a crucial time with the club history when we need to take time to write down our history and how we got to where we are today for those who will come into the club in the future. We really do need for some of our long time club members to share the history with current members so it is not lost forever.

Please send your written opinion and/or historical information about Nor-Cal Club to KIM LEMKE at 7833 Flagstone Drive Pleasanton, CA. 94588-4215.

The Schnauzer Shuffle

SSCNC Member, Judy Geor- geson and her Std. Schnau- zer, Baron, are rallying the local Schnauzers and their humans to get fit in 2010.

Judy is organizing an SSCNC Club Run on October 9, 2010 through an organization called "Run Dog Run". The run will take place in Santa Cruz. As Judy says, as luck would have it there will be several runs in California for the first time this year!!

Judy as the Team Captain and has already recruited 12 SSCNC Members and their- dogs to participate in a rare Human and Dog Run She is working with a local artist / silk screener to come up with SSCNC Schnauzer regalia for the October foot n paw jaunt.

The Santa Cruz event is a run/ walk event and any speed and fitness level can sign up to be a member of the Nor-Cal Stan- dard Schnauzer "team".

The "Run Dog Run" event in October does have a $50 reg- istration fee for dog and hu- man team, which is on par for the going run registration mar- ket, for such events.

Santa Cruz, its only a 5k about 3 mi. You can go at your own speed and the best part is its with our dogs. Young or old, slow or fast, it doesn't matter! It would be great to have a big showing of our beautiful Schnauzers, have fun and get fit all at the same time.

If you are interested in join- ing the SSCNC fun Run in Octo- ber, Contact Judy at red55truck@yahoo.com to sign up for the team. There are SSCNC Members in the Sacramento and the East Bay locales who are already out there walking and welcome additional bodies.

As Roxie says ... Let's Go Team Schnauzers !!!

Dog genes may hold secrets to human disease

Scientists scouring the ge- nome to better understand complex human diseases are looking to an unlikely ally for guidance: our pets.

Dogs have been an integral part of human life for centu- ries. It is precisely because of that intertwined history that dogs are a potentially power- ful tool for researchers seek- ing the genetic roots of every- thing from psychiatric disor- ders to cancer - just two of the ailments that are similar in both humans and dogs.

Last month, scientists study- ing Doberman pinschers with a compulsive behavior disor- der similar to human obses- sive-compulsive disorder found a gene associated with the condition. The genetic hit is now being followed by other researchers, who are studying the same gene in human patients with OCD, in hopes the clue from man's best friend may help explain the disease in people.

"This is exactly where we were hoping to get to," said Elinor Karlsson, a postdoc- toral fellow at the Broad Insti- tute, a genetics research center in Cambridge, and coauthor of a paper on the subject. "This is taking a dis- ease that people have had a lot of trouble working with in humans, that seems to be a multigenic and complex psy- chiatric disease, and using a dog breed to look at some- thing completely new about that disease - something we wouldn't be able to find in any other species."

In dogs, compulsive behavior includes tail chasing, licking their legs until they develop infections, and pacing and circling - versions of normal behaviors such as predatory behavior, grooming, or loco- motion taken to extremes. Those kinds of behaviors parallel the way that normal human behaviors, such as hand washing or checking objects, can become repeti- tive in the estimated 2.2 mil- lion American adults affected by OCD.

The Doberman study was done by researchers at the Cummings School of Veteri- nary Medicine at Tufts Uni- versity, the University of Mas- sachusetts Medical School in Worcester, and the Broad Institute.

Scientists took samples from 92 Doberman pinschers that displayed compulsive behav- ior. Dogs with the disorder compulsively suck their flanks or blankets. Researchers also used samples from 68 normal dogs, and did a genome-wide scan, searching for spots that varied between the two sam- ples.

They found a genetic hot spot that was different in dogs with the compulsive behavior. The hot spot lay in a gene called Cadherin 2, known to be active in the brain and in a family of genes recently implicated in autism.

Dr. Dennis Murphy, a labora- tory chief in the National Insti- tute of Mental Health intramu- ral research program, said he is working to follow the re- search by studying the same gene in more than 300 pa- tients with OCD, 400 of their relatives, and about 600 peo- ple without OCD.

"Identifying a specific gene that could be a candidate gene for a complex disorder like OCD is a gift to have," Murphy said. "This might be a quick route in to a meaningful gene that just could be in- volved in the human disorder, as well."
